PROFESSION: Internationally Acclaimed Singer

MY FAVORITE PASTIME: Looking at myself in the mirror

THE WORST THING: Rooms without mirrors

June Fondue is stellar. I worked on her new fitness video "We Can Work It Out," and she exercises with unparalleled grace. The singer Princess and I sang the video's opening theme song "Don't Stop Pushing Up." June gave me a pre-release copy and I've been working out to it every morning. She makes me feel like a lioness.

I'm here with my husband Wizard Johnson, whom I adore. He's the star player on the Lagoons basketball team, and I'm a legendary singer. My song "Mama Don't Minister" was top of the charts for sixteen months. I'm worth half a billion dollars. The Queen of England and I are intimate friends. If people don't give me proper credit, I just walk away.

HOW I KNEW DR. G. BUSTER: Buster broke off our engagement a year ago

Buster is a degenerate beast. A year ago we were engaged, but then he left me at the altar. Me. It became a national scandal and was covered by every tabloid and MTV video jockey. I had to hide from the paparazzi all of last year, and only returned to the spotlight last Saturday. I had to get married to Wizard in a safe house. It was heartbreaking, and I still fall down and weep anytime I think about it.

Buster wronged everyone, including my longtime friend Carmen San Francisco. Carmen is an internationally lauded master thief. Buster contracted her to steal spandex designs from a secret military base, but when she brought him the classified blueprints, he didn't pay her. He was atrocious and the world is better without him.

Because I'm an outstanding singer, I won a Grammy three years ago for my song "Mama Don't Minister." I take it with me everywhere to remind myself how remarkable I am. It weighs six pounds and is made of the zinc alloy grammium, the most fabulous metal on the planet. June Fondue also wins awards sometimes. Last year, she won the international Bambi award from Germany. It's given out to artists that Germans digged that year. I'm happy for her. She may not be as famous as I am, but at least Germans appreciate her.

Buster did wrong me a year ago, but it's impossible for anyone to ruin me. I worked on my newest album Too Blue To Be True while I was in hiding, and it was released just last week, right before I returned to the spotlight. It's already topped the charts. What's more, my marriage to Wizard is awesome. He brings a magic spark to our relationship that no one else can. I haven't looked back since.

A lot of people argued with Buster, and he and June were always fighting. Once Buster yelled at her for bringing mixed nuts into his studio because he has a deadly allergy to basically anything with the word nut in it: peanuts, walnuts, Nutter Butters, donuts, nutmeg, nutcrackers. They also argued about the designs of her spandex outfits.

I don't think anyone liked Buster's designs. Last year, basketball player Wizard Johnson's spandex uniform was so uncomfortable that his team lost its championship game. His team actually ended the game with negative points. Wizard lost a bonus $300,000 and a sponsorship with the top toaster company in America.

Stephanie Hamburg, who is my producer, refused to work with Buster. Buster wanted her to turn his textbook Snap To It: A History of Spandex Through the Centuries into a movie. Stephanie rejected his proposal, but Buster wouldn't take no for an answer. One night, he followed Stephanie home and stood outside her second story window with a boombox playing, "She Blinded Me With Science." She dropped a flower pot on his head. Then she shouted, "Darling, go play in traffic!" and closed the blinds.
